Business School of Innovation Management

Admissions Policy

Intensifying globalization and rapidly evolving information and communications technologies are causing what many call the fourth industrial revolution. In such an environment, demands are high for individuals able to navigate this new frontier using not only the knowledge of management and IT, but who are also comfortable in the new industries that emerge as the fusion of hitherto separate industrial sectors. What is needed is the type of person we call an innovation practitioner.

Innovation practitioners are not limited to the types of people with the ability to start new businesses, but also those with the competency to pursue innovation in existing businesses, be that through reorganization of existing business models, restructuring of existing business organizations, diversification to new markets, or even societal innovations via social entrepreneurship.

Our goal is to develop talent with the above skill sets. Accordingly, our admission policy is to admit individuals with practical business experience who are interested in and passionate about the opportunity to contribute to business innovation.

Curriculum Policy

The Business School of Innovation Management offers courses of instruction ranging from fundamental subjects to specialized and applied subjects, with our aim being to develop human resources with both the fundamental knowledge and practical skills befitting of a Master of Business Administration with an emphasis on innovation management.

Starting a new business requires an understanding of past business cases and industry trends, as well how this is all playing out currently, and to incorporate all this business knowledge into the decision-making process. Our curriculum is designed to help students acquire such knowledge from past business examples through the “case method.” Our curriculum also includes “IT literacy” which emphasizes evidence-based decision-making that integrates data management, data analytics and Information Technology.

Our curriculum is formulated on the fact that theoretical “book-learning” alone cannot sufficiently develop business innovator talent, and thus requires this learning to be supported with practical experience. For this reason, we utilize the “project method” in which students undertake their own business project assignments, usually in the form of internship projects.

Diploma Policy (degree-conferment policy)

The Business School of Innovation Management aims to nurture human resources capable of pursuing innovation in society or within an organization, and has developed its curriculum with this purpose in mind. Students enhance their understanding of and facility with innovation management through the acquisition of designated credits in fundamental, specialized and applied courses.

Through this approach, students earn the Master of Business Administration degree (MBA) as a result of gaining knowledge of innovation theory and its practical applications. This includes developing an ability to perform critical analysis in real-world environments, attaining proficiency in the conception of innovation strategies based on analytical assessments, achieving facility in the execution of strategies and tactics based in knowledge of innovation theory and practice, and acquiring skill in the communication of business ideas to various stakeholders.

* Diploma Policy is segmented into skills, and each skill is designated by a number as listed below. Refer to the Web Syllabus to find out which skills in the policy can be acquired via which courses.

Item	Ability
DP1	Management expertise to foster social and corporate innovation
DP2	Analytical capacity for extracting actionable management concepts from ambiguous environments
DP3	Conceptual capacity to formulate innovation strategies bases on analytical assessments
DP4	Execution capacity for drafting plans to solve problems on the basis of management expertise
DP5	Capacity to express enterprise ideas and communicate them as a management leader

In addition, submit a letter of reference and a copy of a business card from someone who can vouch for the claims you make in your essay.
